NECHARDEN FOR THE SPERSTANT OF MAR.

EUBJECT: National Intelligence Authority,

By letter of September 20, 1945, the President gave no the following instructions:

I particularly desire that you take the lend in developing a comprehensive and coordinated foreign intelligence program for all Federal agencies concerned with that type of activity. This should be done through the creation of an interdepartmental group, heading up under the State Fepartment, which would formulate plans for my approval.
This procedure will permit the planning of complete coverage of the foreign intelligence field and the assigning and controlling of operations in such manner that the needs of both the individual agencies and the Government as a whole will be met with maximum effectiveness.

Attached is a Flan for carrying out the President's directive.

It has been recommended to me by my Staff Committee after several weeks of discussion and study, and I now recommend it for your favorable consideration.

Attention is invited especially to the following points:

- a. The Flan sets up a Jational Intelligence Authority consisting of the Secretary of State as Chairman and the Secretaries of Mar and Javy, but authorises the Chairman to call in the heads of other Departments and agencies on matters of special interest to them.
- h. The Plan is designed to make fullest use of the intelligence resources of all agencies of the Government, by coordinating their efforts under a comprehensive, Governmentvide program. The proposed machinery is an interdepartmental expanisation under the Authority, with personnel drawn from existing agencies, rather than an independent agency with a separate budget. This is considered advantageous because it fends (1) to sweld publicity and (2) to reduce competition and duplication between the central agency and the intelligence organisations of existing departments and agencies.

- the hands of an efficial of the Department of State, but in the hands of an efficial of the Department of State, but it is provided that the Secretaries of Var and Many must approve the person selected. In that manner the ecordinating responsibility of the State Department for matters involving fereign affairs is recognised, but the executive is made a representative of the Authority as a whole, and not sevely of a single Department.
 - A. The central Secretariat is envisaged as a verking staff of personnel contributed primerily by the State, Var and Navy Departments.
 - s. The Flam does not preclude any centralized intelligence operations (either under the central agency or entside of it) which may prove feasible and desirable as the program of the Authority is developed. It prevides planning mechanisms that may well lead to centralization of intelligence responsibilities in many of the specialized fields, either (1) by vesting responsibility for a particular field in a mingle existing agency or (2) by bringing together the working units of several agencies on a subject into a joint unit under direction of the Authority.
 - i. With respect to elandestine activities ("secret intelligence" and "counter-espienage") I understand the prevailing epinion to be that such operations, if they are to be conducted, might well be under: a central agency; and the Flan sets up machinery for study of that problem in detail and for development of specific operating plans in those fields.

The central agency is conceived in the first instance as a sperimeting and planning mechanism, whose mission is to develop the comprehensive program envisaged by the President; to determine foreign intelligence requirements on a Severment-wide basis, and to recommend means and methods for meeting those requirements, making use of all the intelligence resources of the Government. Many agencies, in addition to the State, War and Many Departments, are engaged in collection and analysis of foreign information, including the Treasury, the Departments of Agriculture, Sommerce and Labor, the Fariff and Maritime Commissions, the Federal Reserve Board and numerous others. Such agencies can make important contributions to foreign intelligence if they work under a coordinated program, so that, within their special fields, they may serve the needs of other Soverment agencies as well as their own.

Under the Plan as proposed, the primary coordinating mechanism is a group of interdepartmental Committees for the various fields of intelligence, which, in addition to their planning functions, will "Serve as a continuing group responsible for maintaining a secretinated program and for reviewing the adequacy and efficiency of all operations involved in the carrying out of such a program." Zentative sugmentions for the principal Committees to be formed are shown on the chart annexed hereto.

Foreign intelligence is a vest and complicated subject, teaching them almost all fields of human knowledge. The problems that it involves do not lend themselves to quick and easy solutions. They must be attacked in detail, and from a long-range standpoint, and es a comprehensive basis. It is believed that the annexed Plan permits that kind of an approach to the subject and gives promise of good results the execution of the Plan is put in competent hands.

STATE DEPARTMENT PLAN FOR A NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE AUTHORITY

Early in December an entirely new proposal for the centralization of intelligence was brought forward by the Department of State. It was drafted by Mr. Alfred McCormack, Special Assistant to the Secretary, who had been with G-2 during the war.

The major points of the plan are brought out in the covering letter from Secretary Byrnes to the Secretaries of War and Navy. Briefly it envisaged the coordination of all government intelligence functions through a system of committees made up of representatives of various departments. No independent intelligence agency was contemplated and consequently there was no idea of having any centralized intelligence operations.

Probably the major defect of the plan was that it made everybody and nobody responsible for intelligence coordination. Detailed criticisms follow the plan itself in this collection.

The McCormack Plan is curiously reminiscent of the proposal put forward by the services members of JIC nearly a year before and embodied in JIC 239/1. Although it is far more inclusive than that proposal there is little difference in the basic conception of "coordinating by committees."
